*Siqing Lu:
China's Foremost
Violinist*

One of the most active violinists today, Siqing Lu is the first Asian violinist to win the prize at the prestigious Paganini International Violin Competition in Italy in 1987. Hailed by Strad as "an outstanding talent", Siqing (pronounced See-Ching) is acknowledged as one of the most outstanding Chinese violinists of his generation. As the most celebrated violinist of his land, Siqing has appeared with all the major orchestras in China and as featured soloist with such orchestras as the Royal Philharmonic, Bern Symphony, Aspen Chamber Symphony, Los Angeles Bowl Orchestra, Paris Sinfonietta, Vancouver Symphony, Russia National Orchestra, among others. He has performed to acclaim in more than thirty countries throughout North and South America, Europe, Asia, including concerts at Avery Fisher Hall, 92nd Street Y, New York; Hollywood Bowl, Los Angeles; Ford Center, Toronto; Royal Opera House, Wigmore Hall, London; Theatre Des Champs Elysees, Louis XIV Opera House at Palace of Versailles, Paris; Victoria Hall, Geneva; Great Hall, Kremlin Palace, Moscow; Suntory Hall, Tokyo, Great Hall of People, Beijing; Hong Kong Cultural Center, Hong Kong; National Concert Hall, Taiwan.

Siqing has released more than a dozen CD and video recordings for such labels as Phillips, Naxos and Marco Polo. He has made four recordings of the most famous Chinese violin work, "Butterly Lovers" violin concerto. His interpretation has been widely considered the best among more than 40 available recordings of this work, and has sold well over a million copies worldwide.

Siqing studied with Prof. Zhenshan Wang, Lord Yehudi Menuhin, Dorothy DeLay and Hyo Kang. Mr. Lu uses a 1742 "Wieniawski" Guarneri del Gesu violin, which is generously loaned to him by the Stradivari Society in Chicago.
